The work is written with a masterly command of all the resources of narrative description and controversy, and cannot fail to make a deep and wide impression in the United States. The writer discriminates between the Catholic Church and what he considers its corruptions. To the first he assumes to belong, and in its true interest he insists that his work is written. It is no tlash of sudden enthusiasm: no hasty unreflect lng response to the magnetism of some powerful and eloquent leader. Neither is it the manifestation of party drill and coherence.

We have no doubt the example and the zealous and manly efforts of a few determined and self-sacrificing patriots have done much towards promoting this change, by giving it public expression, and thus bringing it, so to speak, promptly and fully to the self-consciousness of those in whom the Richelien of Catholicism; the other is It was already transpiring. The value of their labors, and the hereic qualities which enabled them to curry these through to a proximately triumphant result, we need not be afraid of overrating.

Numbers were against them, but "wind and sun" were in their layor. The tide of events coincided with their line of move ment. They were but reapers with the harvest already whitening for their sickles. It is impossible on any other supposition to account for the apparent magnitude of their achievements.

No more signal and impressive evidence of the vast and pervading change which has taken place could be cited than the course of the Louisville Journal. Our readers all know what that course has been. The change in that paper Is all the more signilicant that it does not represent any change of view as to the propriety or morality of TO FIND ONE, is the title of a new book, by emancipation abstractly considered, on the part of its conductors. They make no claim to any such revolution or advance of sentiment. They state with much explicitness that their views have not changed; but that they hold them in abeyance. Why in abeyance? Because they have no longer a and liege subjects forever! The blind panic constituency to receive and organize them into public opinion and law. And in connection with manifold other signs justifies the assumption that the real loyalty of the State is fully ready for eman-

The question of Emancipation will furnish ample common ground for all truly loyal men. And we trust that the deliberations of the convention will be such as to resul in a platform which shall separate the sheep from the goats and give us a sharp and definite and continuous boundary lin between loyalty and treason. The public will expect a friendly, animated, and thorough discussion of the prime question which has occasioned this assemblage of the people in all its bearings. And out of such discussion, it is not unreasonable to anticipate that the most feasible, safe, and readiy applicable scheme will emerge for accomplishing the rescue and renovation of the State.

We have published several articles from the people for amending our State constitution, in a manner contrary to the provisions in that constitution for its own amendment. The argument is based on the ground that such provision is null because of its variance with the bill of rights which is more fundamental and authoritative than itself. The argument seems to us sound and conclusive. But we are not ut all disposed to dogmatize upon it, or insist upon the policy suggested by it. Indeed, the amendment of the Federal Constitution seems to us u surer and readier means of solving this immediate problem. And this measure is liable to neither technical nor moral objections. The Convention will find no diffitions. The Convention will find no difficulty in securing an almost unanimous expression in favor of it. Such an expression will be suggestive to the Logislature of the State and will be Instrumental in reassuring those members who already concur In the measure, and securing the adhesion of those who waver. And whether the people of Kentucky decide to amend their constitution or not, the people of the United States will certainly amend theirs, and present indications are that this will be accomplished at least as soon as the amendment of our State Constitution could be, even if the obstructive clause were ignored. But we shall be ready and eager to concur in any measure or measures which are at once just, loyal and practical. One thing is ninequivocal. The Convention itself stands for emancipation. The abstract nuestion, therefore, as to the propriety of committing itself to the pollcy of emancipation in some form will take up no

THE RICHMOND EXAMINER ON THE REBEI CRISIS AND ITS DEMANDS.

Richmond Examiner of the 30th gives the following editorial, which is strik-ingly significant of the public temper at the

When, in any crisis of a nation's fate men are seen to lose their heads and to look all around them in wild alarm, it is a proof that they at least are subdued. If the mass of their countrymen had no more presence of mind than they have, the doom of all would be near at hand. We have some such frightened counsellors in the ('onfederacy at this moment, and their wild out-cries grate and jar dreadfully upon the generally calm and resolute tone of the country. They do not help, but hinder. They resemble the sinking passengers in the tempest, to whom the boatswain had to say, "You mar our labor; keep your cabins; you do assist the storm," One public journal expects these Confederate States. you do assist the storm." One public jour-nul exhorts these Confederate States to throw themselves back into the nems of England, France and Spain, the powers which first planted colonies here; ncknowledge that we were young birds that had broken the shell too soon; to recant all those high words we have had in our mouths for high words we have had in our months for two or three generations about liberty, rights of man and democracy, and promise uot to do so any more. To be sure the poor frightened creatures tell us to take this course if we should prove unable to maintain our cause against our enemies; but to utter the suggestion, above all to utter it now, is to say too plainly, not if we should, but that we have, proved ourselves unable to sustain ourselves. That is, that we are beaten, overmutched, overwhelmed, and ready to sink.

of the writer makes him even mable tose that neither England, France, nor Spring the three combined, would touch us with For no one can suppose for a moment that they would perpetrate the inconceivable absurdity of suppressing their opinions and "holding them in abeyance" at the expense of their patronage. This phenomenon In the Journal office, therefore, is to be taken as a very important sign of the times. neither England nor France will so much as recognize us-not know even of our ex-istence-while we are vigorously battling and beating back a gigantic invasion, year after year, relying on our own prowess and a good cause, and a leadso to offer them advantageous alllances and reciprocal bene-fits, how would they receive such an invitation as this, now that we are sinking and perishing under the mighty power of the Yankee nation—now that we are beaten and beggared? Will they go to war for our redemption, and as we have nothing else to offer, take ourselves and our children for vassals? This will not do. The alterna tive is not afforded us, as the panic-strick en mortal imagines, to be colonists under England and France, or the subjects of the Yankees. We have not the choice. The very proposal suggested to be made to these powers would prove that we are already subjugated; would be an admission that we had set up a pretension we could not support, and proyoked an enemy we could not fight; and they would coldly bid us creep back into the Union and stay there. They would nu-derstand that the United States, this Confederacy subdued, must be the ruling pow er of the West. Then they would be glad to cement their friendship with our enemies by treating us with containely, and would so endeavor to make a general treaty settling the affairs of America and giving guarantees both to Mexico and Canada. settling the affairs of America and One is ashamed even to refute and rebuke this mean suggestion, begotten by terror npon ignorance. It would be pleasing to think we should never hear more of it, but then there is another and not very dissimian able jurist advocating a conventiou of lar in kind or in origin; another counsellor, who also, of course, takes for granted that we are virtually conquered; who advises ns to make known to Enropean nations that we are ready to abolish slavery; that slavery shall not be permitted to prejudice our recognition as a nation, and we are asured that this would secure and, perhaps, intervention. It is not alleged that England or France, or the Government of either, has ever said or hinted that they would make this bargain. n order to save us from Yankee domina tion, and in return we are to offer them what the destruction of our labor empowers, which would leave us of no use to them indeed, that this would be a great concession to the opinion of mankind, which is anti-slavery, and the evil consequences would fall upon the unfortunate negro whom we should thus basely abandon. Very well. Then it would be a most limiting confession of defeat. We must not deceive ourselves. It signifies nothing to say that we would rather give up slavery than be sub-ected to the Yankee. So we than be subjected to the Yankee. So we should, of course, be, but here once more, this is not the alternative. To give up slavery would not save us from being subject to the Yankees. On the contrary, when we should have made the graceful conces seeing that we were whipped, and the plack taken out of us, would make friends of our brave urmy think of thole wretched outeries of alarm and self-abasement? They so as if we were shipwrecked already, drifting hpon a raft, waving a white flag to every point of the compass, and anxiously scanning the distant horizon and outcrying: "Lo here and lo there," The matter does not so stand with us, and If it dld, we should be already lost. Our hopes never should be already lost. (In hopes never were, and are not now in Europe, Asia or Africa. Here are our grounds: We have the power and materials both to vindicate our independence and destroy our enemies. [From the North Catolina Times.]

There are the strongest reasons for believing that the storm is at last being raised in the interior of this State which must, ere long, eventuate in her deliverance from the removeeventuate in her deliverance from the remorse-less jaws of the Richmond despotism. Refu-gees are pouring in, and they all bring one uniform story of suffering and destitution, and the most unmittigated oppression and tyranny ever inflicted upon any people since the reign of those monsters in human shape in old Rome, Calignla and Nero. Some are ready to seek refuge by proceed-ing North at ones while others we willing ing North at once, while others are willing to "bide their time" by remaining among us. All join in heaping imprecations on the infamous rule of Davis and his wicked co-conspirators. A real genuine Union feeling is strengthening and increasing in every town in almost every quarter of the State. It will yet overwhelm and crush the contemptible despets now engaged with the desperution of demons in trying to keep it down. Many refugees now look forward to the joyous hour when they can return back again to their old homes under the protecting folds of the Stars and Stripes.

Correspondence between General Butler and Admiral Porter. GENERAL BUTLER TO ADMIRAL PORTER. HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF Virginia and North Carolina, December 25, 1864. Admiral: Upon landing the troops and making a thorough reconnoissance of Fort Fisher, both General Weitzel and myself are fully of the opinion that the place could not be carried by assault, as it was left subnot be carried by assanit, as it was let substantially uninjured as a defensive work by the navy fire. We found fourteen guns protected by traverses, two only of which were dismounted, bearing up the beach and covering a strip of land—the only practicable route, not wide enough for a thousand men in line of battle. Having captured Flug Pond battery, the garrison of which—sixty-five men and two commissioned officers five men and two commissioned officers were taken off by the navy, we also cap-tured Half Moon battery and seven officers thred Haff Moon battery and seven officers and two hundred and eight men of the Third North Carolina Junior Reserves, including its commander, from whom I learned that a portion of Hoke's division, consisting of Kirkland's and Hapgood's brigades, had been sent from the lines before Richmond on Tuesday last, arriving at Wilmington Friday night.

General Weitzel advanced his skirmish line within fifty yards of the fort, while the line within fifty yards of the fort, while the garrison were kept in their bombproofs by the fire of the navy, and so closely that three or four men of the picket line ventured upon the parapet and through the sallyport of the works, capturing a horse, which they brought off, killing, the orderly, who was the bearer of a dispatch from the chief of artillery of General Whiting, to bring a light battery within the fort, and also brought away from the parapet the flag of the fort. This was done while the shells of the navy were falling about the leads of the daring men who entered the works; and it was evident, as soon as the fire of the navy ceased because of the darkline within fifty yards of the fort, while the fire of the navy ceased because of the darkss, that the fort was fully manned and opened with grape and canister upon our picket line.

Finding that nothing but the operations regular siege, which did not come within my instructions, would reduce the fort, and in view of the threatening aspect of the weather, the wind arising from the southwest rendering it impossible to make further landing through the surf, I caused the troops, with their prisoners, to re-empark; and I see nothing further that can be done by the land forces. I shall therefore sail for Humpton Roads as soon as the transport fleet can be got in order.

My engineers and officers report Fort Fisher to me as substantially uninjured as as a defensive work.

GENERAL: I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, the substance of which was communicated to me by Gen. Weitzel last night. I have or dered the largest vessels to proceed to Bean-fort to fill up with ammunition to be ready for another uttack in case it is decided to proceed with this matter by making other urrangements. We have not commenced firing rapidly yet, and could keep any rebels inside from showing their heads unti an assaulting column was within twenty cer who took the flag from the parapet, and the brave fellow who brought the horse out from the fort. I think they would have found it an easier conquest than is supposed. I do not, however, pretend to place my opinion in opposition to Gen. Weitzel, whom I know to be an accomplished soldier and engineer, and whose opinion has great weight with me.

I will look out that the troops are all off in safety. We will have a west wind presently and a smooth beach about 3 o'clock, when sufficient boats will be sent for them. TRIAL OF PRINTERS IN RICHMOND.—The three printers who were caught while at-tempting to escape to the Yankees are still being tried by militia court martial, which sits in the State Court House. The two Payants, refugees from the Richmond Dis-patch office, were being tried yesterday. Though exempt by act of Congress, from Though exempt by act of Congress, from military service, and not belonging to any regular military organization, they are being tried for desertion, and, if convicted, will be shot by the Printers' Guard. If attempting to go to the enemy is desertion they are guilty by their own confession, and must be convicted. There is a popular fallacy, which is ln a fair way to be exploded by this trial, that desertion is an offence that can only be committed by persons bethat can only be committed by persons belonging to the land or naval forces.—[Richmond Whig, Dec. 20.

VALERIE DUCLOS:

some Leaves from the Journal of a French Physician.

[From Chambers' Papers for the People.] [CONTINUED FROM WEDNESDAY.]

The sunshine and joyance of the day penetrated and lighted up with strange gayety the sombre abode of the Ducloses. Both husband and wife appeared in unwounted spirits, almost cheerful indeed. The danger, long dreaded, had been met, and successfully evaded Lady Ornshy. and successfully evaded, had been hiet, and successfully evaded. Lady Ormsby had either already left Paris, or was immediately about to do so, her suspicious apparently removed, and convinced, it should seem, of the fruitlessness of any further search for her daughter: Duplessis, attached to the Consul's staff world leave. attached to the Consul's staff, would leave the next day for the Grand Army: there would now be ample leisure to devise some mode of safely disposing of the sole source of future danger—Julie. Valerie would soon be happily married, and then all ne cessary precautions taken, they might hope to sleep ugam at nights, and really enjoy the wealth they had purchased at so dear a

"Quiek, Marie," exclaimed Duclos, ad-dressing his wife; "this is a great holiday for us as well as for the rest of the world. The carriage will be at the door in a few minutes. A few rides ih such glorions weather will soon restore your strength. The evil day, Marie, is past. This Providence, whose mysterions fingers you began to fear were busy sharpening the axe for our destruction, has, you see, either bungled the business, or, which is more probable, has never heard of our little affair!"

Madame buclos sighed, and changed the conversation to a more agreeable topic. 'Valerie wishes to take Julia with her to the Le Blanes. There is no danger, Pierre now in complying with her wish. The lady is as good as gone, and Duplessis will be too busy to heed any thing but the ma-neuvres and the Consul."

"Peste." enclaimed Duclos, in an irri-tated tone; "I wish Valerie had not taken such a fancy to that girl."

At this moment Valerie, charmingly dressed in white, and her hair, as became a youthful fiances, jewelled with pale sprint flowers, entered the room with the elastic step and joyons aspect of youth and happy love. The parents looked with delighte-eyes upon their graceful child. No wonder Auguste le Blanc should so eagerly petition for an earlier day than had been at firs for an earlier day than had been at fi named for his union with that fair glrl, lustrons in her young joy and innocence!

Julie? Ah, you cannot be serious!"
Pierre Duclos kissed the fair, clear brow of his daughter, and, evading her question, told her she might take Julie to the la Blanes with her.

"Thanks, thanks, dear papa! O jour trois fois heureux! Adieu, manaa:" and, embracing her mother, the light-heartest girl flew up stairs again, to lurry and assist Julie in her toilet.

The pomp and circumstance of the grand review had passed and repassed before M. Le Blane's house, and the shadows of liv-trees which dotted the Bonlevard had beginn sensibly to lengthen, when M. de Laincourt, with the familiarity of an old acquaintance, quietly glided into the aparment, and mingled with the gay parly

The action gave M. de Lainconn who had been admiring the gra eful ct Grecian outline of her he of her features; and he started with nacon trollable surprise. "It is doubtless, then, as we suspected," he mentally exclained. "Annette has been sacrificed and the child,

The company began to separate, and De-Liancourt, feeling he had not a moment to se, approached Valerie.

"Paris, madamoiselle, has exhibited a brilliant speciacle to-day."
"Magni ique! No place in the world, Auguste says, could present scenes so imposing and so gorgeons!"

"Auguste is right. In only one feature is this glorious Paris, in my opinion, deficient: the river is scarcely worthy of the splendid quays and bridges which border and span it. If one of our southern rivers, the tlash ing Garonne, for instance, were substituted for the Seine, Paris would be perfect!" "The Garonne! Oh, yes—how well I remember that glorious river. I am, you know, a native of the Gironde—of the immediate neighborhood of Bordeaux, in This way, if you please, mademoiselle. Don't be jealous, Anguste; I will not detain your charming mistress more than a minute or two." "If I am not greatly mistaken, my dear Mademoiselle Duelos," continued M. de Liancourt in the same silvery, insinuating tone, as soon as they had reached a reces at the further end of the apartment, "you an afford me information which will great ly increase the nauriage portion your wor-nly father means to bestow upon you. That young lady, Julie you call her, do you know anything of her parents?"

"Alas, yes, monsion?! Her nother, an English lady, an employee of the terrible Pitt, was guillotined at Bordeaux. Her father died in Paris, and was buried, Ansatte told was there it benefit of the party of the series o nette told me, at l'er la Chaise."

"Annette Vaudry?"
"The same: you knew her, then?"
"Yes. What has become of her?" Valerie hesitated. Her father and mother had solemply enjoined her never to speak of Annette, or she would endanger not only child of a foreigner convicted of crimes against the Republic. For the same reason she knew her father had privately interred the body of Annette. But the "days of the Terror" had been long since past; and peo-ple now said that the Republic itself was about to quietly got rid of. There could be no danger now; and if dear Julie could be benefited by any revelation she could make, restored to her relatives maybe, just, too, at the time when her own marriage would de-

"Oh, yes, indeed. Well then, Annette Vandry died at our house in the neighborhood of Bordeanx. I slept with Julie in the same room, and channed to wake up just as mannia had placed it by her side. My father buried her privately, for fear of those

"The infamous wretches!" murmured De "The infamous wretches!" murmured De Liancourt as he reached the street. "I pity this poor girl though sincerely; but it cannot be helped. Let use see: Miladi Ormsby and her husband are, I dare say, gone by this time; and where the deuse to seek Duplessis now? Allons, if I can find nobody else, a commissary of police is always to be had. But I doubt even now that we shall be able to convict the iniscreants."

But I doubt even now that we shall be able to convict the miscreants."

Valerie was overjoyed that her dear Julie would be restored at last to her country and friends. Her own happiness rendered her doubly generous. The contrast between her own felicity and Julie's adverse lot would no longer chequer and rebuke her joy in her own prospects. And what glad tidings she had to communicate to her parents! The consent of the Le Blancs to her more speedy union with Auguste, which ore speedy union with Auguste, which he knew they both, but her mother esperially, so much desired; and the discovery-for Valerie would not entertain, for all Monsieur Lianconrt's warning, any doubt on the subject—of Julie's relatives. Rich milords no doubt, else why had an addition milords no doubt, else why had an addition to her marriage-portion been hinted at? What a day of joy! what motives for thanks-giving! "Anguste," she added alond, her sweet eyes hinnid with emotion, and placing her hand frankly in his, "we will go to church at early service to-morrow morning; it is quietest then, and my heart, bien aime, is full."

When Valerie and Julie arrived at home, When Valerie and Julie arrived at home, neither Monsier nor Madanne Duclos, nor any of the household, had returned from the Champ de Mars. They were both tired, Julie especially, and Valerie proposed that they should rest themselves, before changing their dresses, on the canape, or large sofa in the alcove at the end of the salon. She wished her nother to can the salon. sola in the alcove at the end of the salon. She wished her mother to see the rich white Brussels lace veil Madame Le Blanc had presented her with, previous to taking it off. They lay down on the canape, Julie encircled in the arms of Valerie, and her drooping head reclined upon her shoulder, Valerie having first drawn and carefully closed the thick curtains, which, as is frequently the case in French houses, divided the alcove—organically used as a hedroom he alcove—oreasionally used as a bedroom from the rest of the apartment. "They will think we are not returned, chere Julie and we shall afford them an agreeable sur-prise in more senses than one." Julie soon fell asleep in her friend's embrace, and she contemplated with tender admiration the sweet features of the beautiful girl, kindled sweet leadiness of the beathing fir, kindled into almost scraphic loveliness by the golden sunset, which streamed in through the open rasement. "If papa and mamma rould see her now," she mirrantred, "snrely they must love her, and treat her kindly when I am gone, should Monsieur De Laincourt's anticipation prove illusive. I will court's anticipation prove illusive. I will show her to them as she is."

For about half an hour no sound was heard in the house but the soft hillaby sing by the gentle and happy Valerie over the angel sleeping in her arms. At length a key turned harshly in the tock of the front-door. Valerie knew that if was her parents, as the servents of the establishment would enter by the back-way, and she instantly ceased her song, the last she was ever destined to pour forth on earth! Monsieur and Madame Duclos, having curefully refastened the door behind them, slowly ascended the stairs, and entered the SCHOOL MATTERS.-The regular monthly meeting of the Board of School Trustees Fined &. was held on Monday evening, thirteen of the twenty-two members being present.

The special committee, to whom was referred the petition of certain teachers for un Continued. increase of salary, reported adversely to an increase of salaries during the present scholastic year. Mr. Elliott, from the minority of the committee, reported in favor dred dollars per annum, a sum equal to ten dollars per mouth. The consideration of house. both reports was postponed until the next regular meeting. The proposed increase, if thousand dollars by the close of the scholastic year, the 1st of July, 1865.

The Rev. Mr. Parsons was commissionthe passage of an act amendatory of the local school law by allowing the Board to fill all vacancies in its membership, permitting them to receive pay-scholars in the city schools, &c.

The salaries of teachers for December and a large number of other claims were allowed.

The Board adjourned to meet again the first Monday evening in February,

WALKER TAYLOR AT OWENSHORO.-A citizen of Owensboro who had been conscripted by Walker Taylor, and escaped, arrived in the city last night. He reports that Taylor has made his headquarters at Owensboro and is enforcing the conscription relentlessly in Daviess county. After conscripting the citizens they are allowed to enlist in the rebel army, with the privilege of a furlough for eight days. This citizen took the benefit of a furlough and intends spending his time in this city. There was a company of colored troops at Owensboro, but we did not learn whether they were cantured or not. From Hilton Head-Blockade Runner Captured -- Savannah News. NEW YORK, Jan. 4 .- The steamer Fulton, from Hilton Head on the 1st, has arrived, bringing 1,100 passengers, including 200 officers Sherman's army. The Palmetto Herald contains the following items: gunboat Acacea captured the steamer Julia with 400 bales of cotton from Charleston for Nassau. The Julia arrived at l'ort Royal on the 28th.

Col. Noble, 17th Connecticut, Lieut. Rice, Assistant Paymaster of Florida, and Capt. Young of Gen. Birney's staff, were captured by guerrillas, while en route from Jackson sonville to San Augustine.

The Palmetto Herald will hereafter be printed at the office of the Savannah News, and will become daily, Mr. Mason, its proprietor, having removed to that eity.

The Herald's editorial correspondent, writing from Savannah under date of the 29th, says: On the night of the capture of Savaninh, when our forces took possession of Fort Jackson, the rebel rain Savaunah opeued fire on the fort. The gnns being spiked, no resistance could be made, but a battery was soon brought to bear on the ram and peppered her briskly. She being well plated was invulnerable to each attack. Not yet has the crushing defeat administered by Bragg and the small forces under his command been fully appreciated. Still, enough is known to produce a decidedly cheerful feeling, and to effect gold, that barometer of the public pulse.

During the first two days of this week there was a very decided appreheusion in the community that Wilmington, our last sea port, would succumb to the immense sea port, would succount to the immense force sent against it, and specie disappeared from the market; but the enemy have expended their utmost strength on Fort Fisher, an outpost of Wilmington, and, being disastrously defeated, gold was ou yesterday offering at $48, with few buyers.

The opinion is now that Wilmington cannot be taken. Its upproaches, on account of the dangerous coast in the neighborhood.

of the dangerous coast in the ueighborhood north of Cape Fear river, cannot be sub-jected to a regular siege, or blockade, and that they cannot be taken by assautt has just been demonstrated. If Butler's and Porter's expedition failed, it is reasonable to suppose that any similar expedition must also fail in an attack on Wilmington. Never again, it is believed, will they find its forts so slightly garrisoned.

The following is the latest telegram from Wilmington:

Wilmington, N. C., Dec. 30.—Gen. Bragg has issued a congratulatory order on the defeat of the enemy's grand armada before Wilmington, paying a merited compliment to Generals Whiting and Kirklaud, Colonel Lamb, and the officers and men engaged. The enemy's attack on the first day, last-ed five hours, and on the second day seven hours, firing altogether over twenty thon-and shots from fifty-nine vegets.
